Forecast for Friday 10 Mar 2023

Weather: Mostly dry and cold overnight with a severe chill although winds will ease later in the night. Snow showers are likely around northwestern coastal areas like Assynt, Skye and Torridon but drier for ranges further inland. Snow showers continuing during the day. A few heavier showers but mostly moving through quite quickly. Away from the coasts mainly dry with a lot of bright or sunny weather.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 80%, Scattered cloud in association with showers around northwestern coast areas.

Low cloud and visibility: Patchy or scattered around showers may lower to 500m at times but away from the coasts mainly clear summits all day with far reaching views. If the band of showers moves south later in the day scattered cloud may form for a time around 600m further inland with visibility falling poor in the snow showers.
